

The use of Morse Code should be maintained at some level, even if only for Extra. Morse code is an international way of speaking English. If we(USA) no longer use it, why should the Russians or Chinese or whoever? I think morse code has led to international understanding and communication between otherwise hostile governments-at least we citizens have had a chance to talk. The use of "Q" signals, if nothing else, via morse code, makes communication possible and morse code is english sent digitally.

Please require it at some level-so that we can keep barriers down between citizens. Or is the Bush administration afraid of us talking to others?
